The Fiasco of the Williams Fight the Talk of the Day.

It Should Result in the Organization of an Athletic Club-The Gun Club's Meet.

The flasco finish of the Williams-Lange fight was the talk of the town all day yes terday. Wherever a group of men gathered on the sidewalk it could be set down that the subject of conversation was the fight of the evening previous.

Among the expressions heard on all There has been some changes in the prices of eggs, butter and cheese. Eggs are selling at 15@17%c.; butter, creamery, 35c.; dairy, 25c.; cheese, 2 pounds for 35c. and the concept of the some of the conceit out of Charley Lange And yet it may be that the need of imme And yet it may be that the need of immediate funds, more than a belief in his powers, led the captain to enter the ring against Utah's champion when he was as flabby and unfit for business as a flabwoman. There was inducement enough to tempt a man pinched for small change to stand up a round or two, as the contract under which he was to engage gave him the same proportion of the gate receipts as the winner. That he did not do better was not so much his fault as that of the management. management.
The newspapers were stuffed with reports of Charley's fine condition when the knowing ones knew full well that he had been reducing his avourdupois at the rate of two pounds a day, and this clear up to the day of the fight without time to build in this exercise. of two pounds a day, and this clear up to the day of the fight without time to build up. His exercise is said to have consisted of stewing in a Turkish bath, and this "softening" process was noticed when he directed two blows at Williams, which if backed with his normal strength would have staggered the young man and made him a little wary of his off-gnard hitting.

Lange never was much of a boxer, and any clever man could reach him with little effort. His only hope was in bull force. any clever man could reach him with little effort. His only hope was in bull force, and the steaming process worked out of him all there had been and left him no possible chance for making even a respectable showing against a man of Williams' science. Williams knowing Lange's poor fencing and his reduced condition sailed into him right and left and rained blows on his unguarded trunk, neck and head in such rapid succession that his antagonist was dazed before the first round was half over, and could not for the life of him tell where they were all coming from.

Williams' quickness and rapid delivery was a revelation to Large, who was slow, measured and two or three blows behind The fight is of no interest, except that it settles the fact that there can be little square fighting until there is an athletic club to handle it. No reputable organization, made up of leading lovers of athletic sports in this city, would have ever allowed a man to enter its ring in the condition that Lange was on Thursday night. The clubs of San Francisco, New Orleans and other places stand by their patrons and will have nothing to do with a fight unless satisfied that it is to be fair and the uniess satisfied that it is to be fair and the men in good condition.

All the spectators were satisfied with Williams' performance as he sailed in to lick his man and did it thoroughly and effectually. Lange might have given a good exhibition had he been properly trained and if he retires whipped in two rounds he has only his own presumption to blame.
